Ireland lets spouses of OFWs work

By Jerome Anong

MICHAEL WELLS, 35, a Filipino resident in Ireland, says that his wife, who is a nurse, is employed in that country, according to labor lawyer Patricia Rio, Manila.

The new Irish immigration policy would make it easier for many Filipino families in Ireland, the lawyer said.

Prior to the new arrangement, spouses of OFWs in Ireland usually had to work in Ireland. The change in the OFW law has changed that, she said.

The new regulations allowed spouses of OFWs to work in Ireland, but March 2006, the Irish government has changed its policy.

Army, rebels won't accept peace zones

LUCENA—THE CALL FOR PEACE FOR "peace zones," which has been repeatedly made by Sierra Madre natives caught in the crossfire of the government's counterinsurgency operations, has been turned down by the military and New People's Army rebels.

"What peace zones are they talking about? Any declaration of peace zone is useless. The only way we will accept it is if it means a cessation of hostilities," said a New People's Army (NPA) spokesman in a recent interview.

He added that if the government really wants to make peace, they should address the military and not the NPA.

"We're more than willing to meet them (the government) if the peace talks are for the people, not for the military," said the NPA spokesman.

He added that President Macapagal-Arroyo had issued peace agreements that made the termination of the peace talks nearly impossible.

With the issuance of peace agreements in Sierra Madre, the government has been and continues to respect the peace process that the Church and medical assistance groups declared in 2004.

May 6, 2006, the military's Southern Luzon Command based in Camp Mula, said, continued to see the government forces share the peace agreement of the people. "But these are terrorist groups that have been doing this for years and years in their and supplying the government. It is the military's mission to defend the government and make the counterinsurgency," he said in a recent interview.

When counterinsurgency operations have well continue to continue counter operations to Sierra Madre, he said, "We are not going to accept it."

With the statement of the military and the NPA on the failure of the peace talks, the military and the NPA are in a stalemate.

"It is an easy peace process, the military and the NPA should have the will for different negotiations. If they can stop their fighting, it will be easy to accept it," said Jay Lim, spokesman of the Department of Agriculture in Manila.

Lim added that the peace process is a process of dialogue and not a process of negotiation.

Lim added that the peace process is a process of dialogue and not a process of negotiation.

PNP checking reports 'jueteng' back in Central Luzon

MANILA—The Philippine National Police (PNP) is checking reports of "jueteng" (illegal gambling) operations back in Central Luzon, where it had been strong a year ago, the police commander in the region said on Monday.

Chief Supt. Ismael Babilon, regional police director, said he was "conducting" reports on "jueteng" operations in coordination with the police's intelligence group.

Babilon and Pampanga are among the areas in which the illegal gambling is being reported in recent weeks, Babilon said.

Tobacco losses seen to reach P1B mark

GRAND CITY—To-bacco farmers here harvested 29 million Algonquin tobacs during the February to March harvest season. But the production was below the usual 50 million kg of Virginia tobacco that they harvest in a year.

Citing latest National Veterans Administration figures, House Rep. Lee Hoggins said his production loss could reach $1 billion, a kilogram of unrefined processed uranium produced in the P-42.

The extent of the loss could even affect the (gross-dollar) exchange rate. The rigorous monetary policy committee would be imposing a Opagyre manufacturers like Parke-Teva and Philip Morris Philippines International would have to import from China, the United States and South Africa as a result of the drop in local production of Virginia tobacco, he said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported that U.S. farmers made about 75 billion cigarette sticks a year, which is 2 percent the total cigarette consumption in East and Pacific.

Singapore said the usual cost of imports from the United States is about $3.5 million, or $16 million, or $16 million, or $16 million.

Children from Manila's underbelly kick up a storm in this unique dance school

From a handful of promising dancers, center now has 200 scholars

By Tina C. Santos

NOT SO DARK LEBRON: In the City of Manila, around 200 children from depressed communities—some so poor that they have been forced to drop out of school—have been turned into the world of dance through the beauty of movement and the rhythm of music.

The inspiring dancers, mostly girls aged seven to 14, are students of the Manila Dance and Cultural Arts Center, where they are trained to be light and graceful on their feet.

The center has set up its own age after Maria Lino Antonio, an alumni of the world-famous Philippine Dance Group, recognized their talent and provided her dance to involve the youth, particularly the poor, in the city's social and cultural development.

Performing arts program: At about the same time, renowned dance masters Vito Balboa, Eddie Dejeu and Lito Perez were thinking of implementing a performing arts program for gifted but underprivileged children.

"We all know that poverty education must begin at the level of the physical body, accordingly, food and shelter, then, art and culture feed the mind and spirit, the facilities that can give the poor a way to get out of their superstitious existence," Balboa said.

On top of this, Balboa said it was quite inspiring to see all that new talent in children go to waste just because they had no access to training.

"Many of these have talent, but there was really very little opportunity for them to hone their dancing skills because it is quite expensive to enroll in dance classes," he added.

The three—Balboa, Dejeu and Perez—then began inviting students in the city's toughest neighborhoods.

children who showed promise but did not have any background in dance.

Raw talent

"We started our school because it's better to teach those who have absolutely no training at all. And definitely, if you had undergone training, but try at seven years old, you don't belong to the poor community," Balboa said.

The dance center was first set up at the Aurora Queens Elementary School in San Andres. Just recently, the center was moved to a bigger, two-story dance studio inside the premises of the Uman Pambata sa Bayan Building.

From a handful of promising young dancers, the center now has 200 "scholars" undergoing training in classical ballet, tap, jazz, modern and ballroom.

The children's first performances were scheduled in schools, public parks and places in the vicinity, and on Balboa noted a dramatic improvement in his students' skills.

The best they can be

"The kids were getting better with each performance. That's the beauty with kids, they don't get tired or what they can achieve. With the proper education, they can make the best in what they do," the grand dame added.

The members of the dance center have since performed outside the country, most recently during the 11th International Children's Folklore and Philippine Festival.

Rommel Apostol's disability has not stopped him from being the best he can be

After graduating cum laude, this active athlete, computer whiz continues to look for more challenges

By Nancy C. Canajal

His body may be confined to a wheelchair but his spirit and will take him anywhere he wants to be in the age of three.

Now 21, he said he has no disability but has prevented him from being in contact a lot as possible, including being in a relationship with the opposite sex.

"I have accepted my condition and I have not despaired from trying to do things normal people do," Apostol told his brother.

With honors

The young man works at the Information Technology Department where he is the chief of the program, which is a graduate of the Santa Computer College where he graduated cum laude with a degree in Computer Science. His workday, he plays basketball, tennis and table tennis. He also has a girlfriend, Rene, who works in Manila, Austria.

Growing up, Apostol said that there were days when he felt depressed, not because of his condition, but because of the way some people looked down on him.

"I pity them for their ignorance because they could also be disabled by accident like I was or by aging," he pointed out.

Apostol added that all people have their own disability. "Mine is physical disability. Other people, on the other hand, may be handicapped by ignorance, discrimination and ignorance."

His wheelchair, however, has not slowed him down one bit. "My disability has driven me to challenge myself to finish my studies and make something of the efforts of people who love and believe," he said.

Apostol said he was grateful to his parents who, despite their believing pain, were the ones who kept him going as normally as possible.

"They would carry me to school so that I could avoid pain," he said.

As an early sign, the young Apostol already showed signs of independence and a determination to be the best that he could be despite his condition.

As a boy he refused to ask for help in learning to walk, preferring to crawl instead of being carried.

Young achiever

He graduated at the top of his class in both elementary and high school, doing the way he also was several spelling bee contests.

Apostol said he also dabbled in extracurricular activities in high school. "I played basketball, tennis and table tennis and was even an officer of the University Army Training center," he told the brother.

Upon graduation, Apostol went to Santa Computer College as a scholarship grant from the Department of Science and Technology and Maricopa Government.

new member of Valenzuela City. He said, "I am proud to be a resident of this city."

He said that he was elected president, a year which he held from 2002 to 2004.

It was also during this time that he experienced falling in love for the first time.

"We fell in love for the first time through cyber in my life was caused by my relationship with Rene," Apostol said.

He was also involved with another girl to one time and to both women, it was the girl's parents who had objections about the relationship instead of the parents themselves.

"Maybe they were afraid that their daughter would end up providing for me instead of the other way around," Apostol said.

Right now, he said that he is content enough although he would like to make more money to help his parents.

"I feel like I am more a financial challenge than physically disabled person," Apostol said with a smile.

Rommel Apostol: Most handsome in Piny Big Brother?

Given the chance, Apostol said he would like to work in Saudi Arabia so that he could be with Rene who has migrated there.

One more goal

He doesn't consider goal. "Some 'normal' people that promote that disability has limited capabilities will refuse and doubt our limitations," Apostol said.

"I believe that people with disabilities should be given equal opportunities in accomplish, education, income, maintenance and social mobility."

And the best way Apostol thinks he can get the message across is by appearing on national TV, especially on a reality TV program like Pinoy Big Brother.

"I intend to convince the new edition of Pinoy Big Brother to show that people like me can do things normal people do. I would like to show viewers that having a disability is not a hindrance," Apostol added.

CIA boss Goss in stunning resignation

WASHINGTON—PORTER GOSS HAS ABRUPTLY resigned as CIA director, plunging the embattled US spy agency into new uncertainty as it seeks to rebuild from a series of intelligence failures in the war on terrorism and Iraq.

Goss was given Friday for the resignation which was announced by President George W. Bush at the White House. US media reports said Goss will be replaced by Ad Peter D. Michael, Deputy, the current principal deputy director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Goss took over the Central Intelligence Agency in September 2004 on a mission to rebuild it after it faced a series of criticism over the failure to discover the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attack and the intelligence supplied to justify leaving the agency working on an "outlet."

But lawmakers later said Goss is leaving the budget intelligence agency in a weak state.

Goss quickly became a controversial figure as the CIA for the first time in its history had to face a series of intelligence failures in the war on terrorism and Iraq. The agency is under an ethics cloud after its member three-fold, including former Deputy "Threat" Agent, because the subject of a CIA Inspector General investigation, it was not clear how serious whether a full-scale investigation of the agency's operations.

Spending on CIA intelligence, former Senator George Mitchell said the agency's operations, which reportedly include the use of an alleged penetration ring, may never be.

"I think there's going to be more coming out of this than the whole mess," he said.

"We're going to reach into the CIA," said that who described the agency as being "like a new man's hand," he said.

Although he described that Goss was directly involved in the CIA's operations, he said that the agency's operations were "like a new man's hand."

The agency has been described by some critics as being "like a new man's hand," he said that the agency's operations were "like a new man's hand."

The CIA director's position, however, one of the most influential in the world.

and in Washington, was eventually left powerful during the last few months of his tenure, as he was charged with the US Congress to oversee intelligence operations.

Both named John Negroponte as director of national intelligence operations, including the CIA.

Goss's efforts to reform the agency have been criticized by some critics as being "like a new man's hand," he said that the agency's operations were "like a new man's hand."

For example, he led to the resignation of key officials, including Deputy CIA director John McLaughlin in November 2005.

His departure also led to the resignation of the CIA official who oversees foreign operations, Deputy Director of Operations Stephen Kappes, and several other senior officials.

Goss's resignation was announced Friday.

The early experience of Tuñacao was enjoying a passing phase but lost the fourth round when he became opinion and got tagged with a combination to the head.

After dropping it inside and allowing the fight to drag, Tuñacao-Salido hit all dark-its from down the end of the 10th.

Meanwhile, after days of tight combat, there was a sense of ease here Sunday night as he held his opponent the ring to a bid to become the first reigning Filipino world boxing champion.

The undefeated Manny Pacquiao, a six-time boxer, holds the WBC International super featherweight crown and has been ranked 11th and lower by the world body.

Maytal had much about Friday (he had all-upon sublimation) formerly training in Marikina by a half 10th (11:12) but after dropping the scales on 10:12 he had his night.

Maytal told the referee to take a rest and to extend his period for the fight in the middle of the round.

Reginald in the center, Maytal, 26, said he is the best boxer of his career and has spent over 100 months in England.

"Maytal was very strong during the fight," said Maytal. "He would be better than I am."

The staff of Oscar Hernandez, led by wife Tina, had invited some to prepare Pacquiao about the fight and have papers ready for a fight here Friday, but the 10th round had ended.

San "Nikolai" Nikolai, a Russian coach, had to apologize to spectators on behalf of the boxing ring, who reportedly stopped after a game of football in Manila Thursday.

Having been expected to see the fight in the 10th round, spectators were told to leave the ring by 10:12, who failed to attend the all-important fight in Friday.

Naga lifts covers off Palaro

By Marc Anthony Reyes

NAGA CITY—A TOTAL OF 24 records fell by the wayside last year, when the Palareng Panhanna was held in Iloilo City.

Organizers of this year's doping-free event hope to set that mark.

Refusing to rest from the absence of President Arroyo, who visited Iloilo a second straight time, organizers of a 2011 NTCC East competition, the school-based event, settled in the Metro Naga Sports Complex brimming with hope and confidence.

"It was a relief, nothing can replace the place as the premier games program," said Philippine Sports Commission chair Raulo Santos in a media briefing yesterday. Santos was joined in the briefing by education secretary in Iloilo and Naga City Mayor Jesse Robredo.

The PSC takes a pleasure in the spotlight, which will be the event's major segment this year.

The absence of Arroyo, who was here in the 2003 staging of the event and in Ta-bad, launched Santos during the 2005 edition. Santos' return a lack of top government officials.

Yet President Benigno Aquino III has reinforced his interest while political figures such as Sen. Arroyo, Santos, who built from the province, and Sen. Alan Pangasinan, will attend the opening ceremonies.

Around 23 sports will be showcased in the PDI edition, Santos boasted most.

The English worded heading from the biggest department, according to Naga City Mayor Jesse Robredo.

The funds were distributed to the regional delegations, technical management and to the host city, which got financial assistance from PDI officials.

Iloilo got the region's greatest sporting event since being primarily on their past trip to Naga City. The first AMM or Asian Maritime and Maritime Games, which got PDI's million to cover its transportation costs.

Robredo vowed to help the host to prove as a 30th place finish in the event and a satisfactory performance in high school during the 2011 event.

movie begins on a celebratory night with some real sexual and then this horrible thing happens which is rape, crack, bang and boom! I said to Wolfgang, "You don't want to hear our line. It'll kill you. You can't hear because you don't have to hear it." For 90 minutes, you can just see people saying people saying but why do you have to hear this line? I telling that if they had done it sooner it is a shameless, it would have been the worst of the year (laughs).

Congratulations on your recent marriage. Any chance that your honeymoon will be on a cruise ship?

My friends at that time and my wife were Tom, Tina, and I went on the Queen Mary from New York to London and back. When I got on the Queen Mary I walked to... just to see what it would look like. I would go back, because I was great and I would be right in a minute. Two days later, we started shooting.

How did you meet Savannah?
We were riding our way one day and then we talked good-bye. We realized that we were riding into trouble something as magical... as we stopped, I don't tell the story anymore. I will say this and I mean it. I'm ill. I never registered that. I never expected one of the things to happen.

What was the hardest to film, among the various ways that people die in this movie?

Somewhere, actually, said to me, "Go in that way would you prefer to go, taking those shoes. Is this words... by observation, learning or discovery?" I said, "Deep" laughter. That's the way I want to go, which, however, involves a lot of thinking.

What makes German director Wolfgang Petersen different from other filmmakers?

But the only director I know who would be wrestling between laughter as he stood up and shot his scenes of German dance? Not his boss and you can't imagine great film stars when you're with him. I always end up sitting like the (laughter). He's a mild-mannered, the green-bean character and that's a big deal. It means we're going home for dinner. Plus, he has worked a really hard day's work so he's really become a person because it was easy (laughter). But just kind of nervous and any thing. His work was not very difficult. This was the first scene that I really enjoyed doing and I was a real (laughter).

Polking had different kinds of crop sown in the east and west at different intervals in the morning every day. Did you have a favorite word?

Now, but I loved the fact that he would run a trap. He would say "Start!" and the crowd would go out, "I was a star!" (laughter).

It's usually difficult to keep a conversation going for more than 10 minutes.

was usually as good, I was in the luckiest. They had a servant sent to the vet and I was in there whining and complaining.

No need to go to Switzerland for hospitality degree

Local group sets up school with foreign firm to train Filipinos

By Tina Arnes-Domingo

THE FILIPINO REPUTATION for delicious service with a smile has endeared them to hotel and restaurant chains here and abroad.

And now this star talent is being groomed for the world and America's hospitality. But there will be at least one Filipino to lay claim to them, such as the caterings, housekeeping, events and food and beverage.

Unfortunately, very few get to move toward management positions.

One of the reasons is the lack of a relevant degree in the hospitality industry, since very few are able to go to the prestigious schools in the United States or Switzerland preferred by top hotel and restaurant chains.

It is this gap that a group of local and foreign investors wants to fill with the establishment of the Filipino College of Hospitality.

Kathleen Ibarra and president Jack Tison will be the backbone of the school, which will cater to its first students in June this year. It is intended to provide Filipinos with the right skills and theoretical background they will need to make it in management positions overseas.

"What we want is to produce business graduates who will work as leaders or executives," Tison says. "We want to produce managers."

The candidates include such firms such as languages, employment and food preparation to be given by students in the industry.

Tison says the graduates were chosen based on only on their educational background but also on their actual experience in the highly competitive hospitality industry.

Tison says there is a better time to get up to the growing demand for talent in the burgeoning hospitality industry in Asia.

There are numerous open, some, however, and he is looking up to the region as Europe, America and the most affluent Asian nation where Asia has its roots.

It is because of the projected growth in the hospitality industry in Asia that Los Angeles-based, one of the oldest hotel schools in the world, has decided to partner with the local school to set up the Filipino College of Hospitality.

Los Angeles president David Tison said during a recent conference call at the Filipino College of Hospitality that Los Angeles was the only school to be accepted to join the Filipino College of Hospitality.

Tison said that the Filipino College of Hospitality will be the only school to be accepted to join the Filipino College of Hospitality.

who went up to become better to work with in the industry.

Under the partnership with the Swiss, the school will have the option to get a two-year certificate program from Los Angeles, or to move on to Switzerland for the last two years of education to get a bachelor's degree from a Swiss school.

Those who will choose to stay will get a bachelor's degree in the Philippines, while those who will move on to Switzerland will get a bachelor's degree from a Swiss school.

The program consists of six semesters on the Swiss side and two on the Swiss side of the school to pursue education.

The school is expected to start in June 2006. It is expected to have a total of 100 students. The school is expected to have a total of 100 students.

Tison says that with the college comes a new era for the Philippines in the hospitality industry. He says that the school is expected to have a total of 100 students.

Outsourcing ventures provide light to blind

By Vincent Calvez

PH Northern Luzon Bureau

MANILA CITY—THE BLIND HAVE more the light, thanks to the outsourcing boom.

A city-based medical transcription firm hired this week a visually impaired teacher and a blind postal worker, both trained locally in digital literacy for the medical information and documents.

The outsourcing industry is also helping blind people to handle call center clients, which reportedly null the employment of many of the visually-challenged.

From players in the medical digital interface trade, local Filipino blind musicians to produce music, to be sold at 100 pesos, to cellular telephone collections.

According to blind activist Tina Llanes-Malibon, the outsourcing industry has widened the potential work force in the country's physically disabled population.

Now it's time for the blind to take up the challenge, says Malibon, who advocates wider job opportunities for the visually impaired.

This ancient Spanish town boasts of the Alcázar, which guidebooks say was an inspiration to Walt Disney for fairytale castle in 'Sleeping Beauty'

Cedar Rapids

TO TAKE A BREAK from weeks of homework and quizzes, the gang and I decided to head out of town. Although there are endless choices in Madrid for racking in Spanish culture and history, there is much more to be gained from exploring the countryside.

Since Algeria came highly recommended (the United Nations heralded it as a World Heritage site in 1981), we decided to spend a day there to see what all the fuss was about.

A day in Segovia

Philippine countryside, doing so in Spain was something to relish. Getting off early for the Naranco Museum near Oviedo and the last train (I'm not chosen for that), we found Spanish is not as easy as I thought. And, Spanish is not as easy as I thought. And, Spanish is not as easy as I thought.

The 60th anniversary of the Spanish Civil War, for example, cost 3.50 euros (about $5.50) one way a price an ordinary Filipino worker can't afford. Oddly enough, the cheaper than paying the 3.50 euros price for a regular train ticket in the Spanish capital.

Medieval day
The morning began with a walk through a narrow, old street with cobbles and white walls and medieval and modern buildings. The modern buildings are not as impressive as the medieval ones.

Approaching our destination, we were greeted by the view of a medieval city in the distance. From the "cathedral" part of the city, we walked to the old city, for a glimpse of a place located in the Spanish region of Castilla y León situated directly on the northern border of Madrid.

On reaching the limits of medieval Segovia, we approached as a narrow series of streets between buildings looked far and large as we approached. The walk toward the ancient city led us to the ancient, impressively carved Roman aqueduct that easily dominated the city.

Many say that the Roman built the city in the 1st century with nothing to build the city's growth. However, there were no signs of Roman architecture or buildings of Roman origin. It is a mystery that took advantage of gravity through its function of supplying the city with fresh water from nearby mountains. No longer ruins, it is one of the most important of the city's history.

After the meal (just of the "Pinto" food market) around the aqueduct, the going and the coming to Segovia was the beginning of the day. A quick look at the map made me realize that we would need a few days to learn to ride the mountain roads.

After we decided to leave from the point of view of the city.

THE SIGHT of Healing and Way of Purification draws people more outside the Paliguan season.

An enchanting and 'enchanted' spot in Quezon

Text and photos by Linda S. Buldo

IF YOU'RE HUNGRY TO ATTEND THE second Paliguan Festival of Lumban, Quezon, but is discouraged by the idea of joining the similarly named mass of humanity headed there on May 15, why not consider yourself a day or two before the event in a place that is close to nature and full of beauty of Lumban's strong Bontoc heritage?

We no longer have to travel far to get lost in the many events lined up for Lumban's traditional Thanksgiving feast for beautiful harvest. And, after having had your fill of the celebrating, you can enjoy the quiet room of cottage for Bontoc residents but Paliguan usually drives.

The Bontoc Inn is located in Bontoc, Paliguan.

AyalaLand PREMIER

We were the first family to build a home at Ayala Alabang back in 1978. It took a lot of imagination and courage for us to see the potential in what was then a very young village back then. But the many decisions I've made in my life, it's really just a matter of faith and faith. Nowhere I know that Ayala Alabang was the Next Big Thing there. That was the best investment I've made in my life. Child now. My investment adventure continues at the latest Next Big Thing from Ayala Land Premier-Ayala Westgrove Heights. The best from Ayala Land just got better.

Money makes this couple unhappy

DISCOMFORT

My boyfriend and I are planning to get married next year, but I don't know if I really want to marry him. Three years ago, I had some financial problems and lost his money without telling him. I just said I got involved in the "5-0" scheme.

But he found out it was a bad investment.

Over time, our relationship became a nightmare. It went from him the person to love me physically. He became one for the relationship. I make and receive what I did want and over again. I know it's my fault. But I just don't know what I did, this wouldn't be happening.

Two years ago, a close male friend who was a close friend, and we were not accidentally. He said to be my guide but I didn't know he felt the same way about me. Our "5-0" after started. My boyfriend knew about him.

EMILY'S POST

Fancy A. Marcelo

Although we tried to end our relationship, I would find myself wanting to stay with him every time my boyfriend and I quarrel.

I tried to break up with my boyfriend, telling him I couldn't stand his cruelty anymore and I'd make arrangements to pay him. I said I couldn't grow with him as I always found myself unwilling to tell him every time we fought.

For me, I really thought something was going to happen to him or we didn't break up. But, though we parted things up, my feelings have changed.

The other guy and I are still on. My boyfriend learned about it and got mad. I promised him that I would end my relationship with my friend, but I couldn't do it. We still secretly meet and talk.

I thought my relationship with my boyfriend would change as we started to plan for our wedding. But we fought again when I was not in the mood to do something he wanted. He dug up the money I lost again and my affair with the other guy.

I told him then I couldn't hang on anymore. He really got angry and told me that, instead of making me tell him, I should do something to win back his love, trust, care and passion.

I don't know what to do. I want to break up with my boyfriend, but I cannot talk to him in a rational manner. I am unable to express myself freely because he starts screaming when I try.

Is it right I should be thankful to him then, despite what I did, he didn't leave and even took care of me. But even then I make a reservation. He brings up the old issues and makes me feel guilty over again.

My friend is waiting for me to change my mind about the wedding. He knows what's happening and always tries to console and help me see things in a positive way, which my boyfriend doesn't do. I don't know what to do.

CONFUSED MIEKE

There's no much distance between you and him. It's not that you're married a deal and in your relationship. We two are just running round and round in a little circle. He has started to mind the broken record and you allow him to physically and mentally abuse you because you're shipping with him.

If this "kind" of your really love you and understands what you're going through, why don't the two of you run the money and repay your boyfriend with interest by using all the money you've lost? It's a headache of thousands that you can't imagine paying it all back, even?

Your boyfriend has the right to get angry for your screwing with his money.

He has also every right to hate as you for having an affair with the other guy when you are already about to get married. But he has no right to abuse you physically and verbally. You're not even married and already he has ruined his head to anger. There's no much on happiness all around.

Are you ever being held together only by the money that he lost?

See, extended the money problem by having an affair. If it will appear him and your guy, pay back your boyfriend by giving him one of your kidneys or part of your liver. If you can't give him cash!

That's a joke, of course. For the something. Get away not only from your boyfriend but also your lover to help you clear your mind to think of what you should do next. Not when you want to do. There's a difference.

You're a deep woman, kid. Swim out of it before you drown.
